Vietnam Tourist Information. Welcome to Vietnam!

Vietnam is a country any serious traveler should visit at least once in his/her life. Its natural settings, its religious monuments, its local markets, its people, its cuisine, and its beaches are the main reasons for visiting, but there are many more. If you look at the map, you will see what the country looks like. There are two ways to visit Vietnam: starting in Hanoi, and going South; or starting in Saigon, and going north.

When to Go/Climate:

There is no real best or worst time to visit Vietnam, with travel possible all year, but the seasons vary across the country and you should be prepared to encounter some rain whenever you decide to travel.

Northern Vietnam, (e.g. Hanoi, Halong Bay and Sapa) can be quite cold, damp and misty from November to March. However, it is also possible to experience lovely sunny, cloudless days here during this period. You might need warm clothing and an anorak or other waterproof in case of rain, but these can be cheaply purchased locally if required.

The central region (Hue, Hoi An, Danang and Nha Trang) is at its wettest from September through to December. Traditionally this period sees monsoon rains and occasional typhoons which can cause flooding in the area. Whilst this is rarely of such a level as to seriously affect an itinerary we do advise people travelling in this area over this period that there may be last minute changes to itineraries to accommodate for the weather conditions.

Some people might say that our summer months (June, July, August) are the best time to visit Vietnam. Unusually for Asia the weather in central Vietnam is likely to be sunny and clear during this time, and although there may be short downpours in the south and north, many people see no rain at all and enjoy cloudless sunny skies.

Southern Vietnam will be very humid, and thunderstorms cannot be ruled out, but these generally clear the air and do not prevent you from sightseeing.
Get around: Moving around Vietnam can be done on bus, train and/or plane. For long distances I recommend plane, train is also an option. Bus should only be considered in short journeys.

Hanoi is the capital of Vietnam. It is one of the two entry points to the country. The first impression you will have, is that this is a chaotic city. But the longer you stay, the more you will appreciate Hanoi. To visit Hanoi, you will need around seven days. Most tourists do not stay for so long here. They stay a couple of days, visit the Old District, and go to Ha Long Bay or Sapa. If you can, stay longer and explore the city and its lakes. If you want to do a tour of Vietnam, your next stop should be Hue. You can get there by plane, train or private car.

Ha Long Bay is an UNESCO World Heritage site with its thousands of islands. A two or three day tour should be enough to visit Ha long Bay. In Summer its air will be clearer and its water bluer, but it can be visited any season. You get there by van from Hanoi.

Sapa is the name of a town in the Northwest of Vietnam, from where you go on many trekkings and excursions, and visit the traditional ethnic peoples who inhabit this mountainous region. How long you stay in Sapa's region depends on the excursions you want to do. Most trekkings last from two to five days. Go on a weekend and you will enjoy its markets. You get to Sapa by an overnight train from Hanoi. Winters can be quite cold.

Hue 410 miles (660 km) south of Hanoi sits this ancient capital of Vietnam. To visit the city you need two days. Add another day to visit the surrounding temples (must see). If you are traveling South, your next stop should be Hoi An. You get there by private car. If you are traveling North, your next stop is Hanoi.

Da Nang the third biggest city in Vietnam, but has not much interest for tourists. If you are traveling around Vietnam, you go here only to get to the south after visiting Hoi An.

Hoi An is another must see. Dedicate a couple of days to visit its picturesque streets. This is also the place to buy taylor clothes. There is also a nice beach, in case you want to stay longer. If you are traveling North, your next stop is Hue. If you are traveling South, your next stop can be Nha Trang, Muine or Saigon. To get to any of these destinations you should take the train, private car (in Da Nang) or the plane

Nha Trang is a big town with nice beaches. A great place to relax and to do snorkeling. If traveling North your next stop should be Hoi An. If traveling South, you can go straight to Saigon, or stop in Muine. You can get there by car .

Mui Ne is another beach destination. You can relax on the beach. From here you should go to Saigon, if traveling south

Buon Ma Thuot where wild elephants are still being domesticated offers travelers fresh nature beauty characterized by temperate climate, waterfalls, rivers, lakes.

Saigon or Ho Chi Minh -- is the business city in Vietnam. It is even noisier and more chaotic than Hanoi. From here you can do an excursion to the Mekong Delta.

Mekong Delta is another 'must see' in any travel to Vietnam. Do not miss its floating markets. You get here by private car from Saigon

Our clients ever had wonderful experiences in Vietnam. Most of them have applauded and highly appreciated the services we provided.
